John C. Watkins is a Latino Professor in the Department of Computer Information Technologies at Westchester Community College. He currently serves as the Curriculum Chair for the Cybersecurity program, Adjunct Coordinator for the Department, Coach for their Cyber-Team, and the Director of WCC Robert Wiener National Center of Excellence in Cybersecurity Education. Watkins teaches security, forensics, and ethical hacking courses at WCC and as an adjunct professor at other Universities. He has created numerous programs and workshops, increasing the competitive advantage for students going into the workforce. He is also involved with initiatives to promote education in Cybersecurity including the CAE Northeast Regional Coordinator for Cyber Competitions and often presents at National Conferences. During teaching, Watkins brings this hands-on experience to the classroom setting from his consulting security firm, giving students a valuable window into the professional world of IT security.
